Bioethics Lecture Series
2016-17

Abraham Nussbaum practices medicine at Denver Health, an academic safety-net health system in downtown Denver. He currently serves as Chief Education Officer for Denver Health’s health professional education programs.

Dr. Nussbaum grew up in Colorado, studied literature and religion at Swarthmore, and completed medical school and psychiatry residency at the University of North Carolina, where he learned to deliver evidence-based care for persons with mental illness and participated in schizophrenia research.

In his practice, he strives to inhabit the roles described in his book The Finest Traditions of My Calling: One Physician’s Search for the Renewal of Medicine, which asks how he and his fellow practitioners can restore patients to health through person-centered care.
