Undergraduate Elective Course: The Good Physician: Vocation, Calling and Clinical Excellence

“The Good Physician: Vocation, Calling and Clinical Excellence” focuses on the age old question: “How does one become a good physician?” Interdisciplinary literature from medicine, sociology, moral psychology, philosophy, ethics and theology are evaluated to explore contemporary answers to this question. Through the course, students develop perspectives on the goals of medicine, medical professionalism, the doctor-patient relationship, vocation and calling, religion in medicine and character development in medical education.
