

Angela Pace-Moody, MS is the Center Director of the Bucksbaum Institute for Clinical Excellence at the University of Chicago. Ms. Pace-Moody is responsible for the financial, programmatic, and administrative leadership of the Institute's thirty programs, which include local, national, and international initiatives.

Ms. Pace-Moody has more than two decades of management experience in the corporate, nonprofit, government, philanthropy, and academic sectors. Angela's management expertise includes projects in healthcare, community development, energy efficiency, and urban planning throughout the United States. She has also worked with the Columbia University Earth Institute and the United Nations on an international development plan for the city of Accra, Ghana.

Angela earned her B.A. from the University of Chicago in an inter-disciplinary Social Science program: Law, Letters & Society; she earned her M.S. in Urban Planning from the Graduate School of Architecture at Columbia University in New York City; and she has taken several leadership development courses at the University of Chicago Booth School of Business. Also, through her board work, Angela has provided strategic leadership to more than 10 non-profit organizations over the last 15 years.